THE COURT HOUSE

Remodeled and Greatly Improved for Fall Court.

Improvements About Complete And Will Soon Be Ready For Occupancy.

The extensive improvements that have been in progress on the Christian county court house for three months are nearing completion, and the remodeled building will be ready for occupancy in a few days. Its internal arrangements have been completely changed. The large vestibule, formerly used for the stairways on either side, has been utilized for additional office rooms, and the steps now go up from the main hallway, in two flights.

The court room above has been repaired and repainted and is greatly improved in appearance. The outside of the building has not been changed, except that a new and larger clock tower has been built, and the whole building given a new coat of paint.

The court house in Hopkinsville was burned by Gen. H. B. Lyon, in his raid from Paris, Tenn., to Litchfield, Ky., in December 1864. Ours was one of a dozen court-houses destroyed because he found them occupied by union soldiers as headquarters.

In 1869 a new and better building was put up and it has been several times improved and changed more or less in the last 34 years. The repairs this summer have been more extensive than at any time heretofore, and the county now has one of the best and handsomest courthouses to be found in the State.

County Clerk Prowse and County Judge Fowler have been temporarily occupying the old Planters Bank building. They will return to their rooms in the court house in a few days.

HART DISCHARGED.

Negro Boy Who Killed Jabin White Goes Free.

Lewis Hart, the negro boy who killed Jabin White, another boy about his size, two weeks ago, had his examining trial before Judge W. T. Fowler yesterday and was discharged.

Hart is about 14 years old, small and very black. He put in a plea of self defense and proved by several witnesses that the other boy had threatened to kill him and was carrying a pistol for him at the time he shot him.

The boys both lived at Mr. Howard Brame's, near Howell. The Hart boy had been in jail since his arrest. He went to his home in the country yesterday afternoon.

HENDERSON GRAY.

Todd County Couple Wedded Yesterday.

Mr. Albert Sydney Henderson and Miss Maude Gray, a young couple from Todd county, came to the city yesterday and procured license to wed. The ceremony was performed by Judge W. T. Fowler in his office, and they left for their home near Fairview.

Dixie Has a Pup.

The city's bloodhound, "Dixie," has a pup and great excitement prevails around the police headquarters in consequence. The addition to the city's canine stock is a female and jet black. Her sire was "Old King," the celebrated hound of Morganfield. Judge Bell and Chief Armstrong have been appointed a committee to select a name for the mascot.

Colored Man Dead.

Henry Young, an old colored man about 60 years old, died Saturday at the home of Jesse Martin, on the Greenville road.

BUSINESS MEN

Put Out a Ticket of Independent Democrats.

Telephone Issue Causes a Movement For a New City Council.

An organized movement in favor of cheaper telephones and better telephone service, which had been taking shape for some time for a year or more in fact, culminated Friday night in the nomination of a Business Men's ticket in several wards of the city, in which contests will be made. The KENTUCKIAN learns from business men who participated in the meeting that representative citizens and leading Democrats from every ward in the city were present and united in the opinion that a better city government, in many respects, could be secured by the united action of business men, since the Republicans have not put a ticket in the field for a number of years, and announce that they will not do so this year. One of the leading supporters of the ticket made this statement:

"The present city council has declined to sell a telephone franchise fixing a maximum schedule of rates, and the franchise of the Cumberland Telephone Company expired August 3, 1902. It will be remembered that such a franchise was sold in July, 1902, to parties representing the Home Company, which the Cumberland people fought bitterly before the council, openly and boldly, and its attorney succeeded in having the franchise rejected after it had been sold by the mayor and paid for.

There was much indignation at the time and in the face of public opinion a majority of the council coolly entered into an arrangement under which the Cumberland has been protected from possible competition and is still doing business at its old rates, without material modification, although no franchise has been sold to take the place of the old one. The business men of the city do not believe they can get relief from the telephone monopoly unless a new council is elected and so the ticket was nominated. It is made up of men who are worth in the aggregate several hundred thousand dollars, and every man on the ticket is a Democrat.

An effort was made to get away as far as possible from politics and political factions. Two of the present councilmen, whose records were acceptable to the business interest of the city, were endorsed. These were Councilmen J. B. Jackson and J. G. Duncan, of the Sixth and Seventh wards.

The other four were selected equally from the supporters of Bush and Cook. Mr. M. C. Forbes in the Second and Mr. B. W. Harrod in the Third wards, were for Bush and Mr. Walter S. Elgin and Ex-Mayor F. W. Dabney, of the First and Fourth wards, voted for Junge Cook. They are good and representative men and staunch Democrats who will be free from outside controlling influences of every kind and give their attention to the best interest of the city."

Another gentleman in discussing the telephone issue said:

"The election of the business men's ticket will on the one item of telephones save the people at least $4,000 or $5,000 a year. It was shown by Mr. R. E. Cooper's able argument before the council last year, as a representative of the business men, that Hopkinsville subscribers are forced to pay at least 50 cents more per month than other cities of similar size and conditions. There are 700 or more subscribers in the Hopkinsville exchange and a little mathematics will demonstrate that the people are paying about $350 or $400 a month more than the service is worth in other cities. Besides, the Cumberland is capitalized at several million dollars and has moved its home office to this city, it is said, to escape franchise taxes in Nashville.

If required to pay franchise taxes here, it would reduce the taxes of every person in the city more than one half. Don't you think the people are right in rising up against such a protected monopoly, when competing companies are begging to enter the city, under the provisions of the constitution? The home company has invaded the county with a line from Clarksville to Lafayette.

It is spreading into all parts of the Cumberland's territory, except Hopkinsville, and wherever it goes telephone rates drop and the service is made more efficient. It is a question far more important than politics this year, and besides both sides have about all the politics on hand they can handle, without engaging in ward politics."

These expressions will give the reader an idea of the objects of the movement, which has already developed a great deal of strength.

POWERS CASE

About Ready to Go to the Jury.

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 22.—Jim Howard was called to the stand in the Powers trial this afternoon. He denied ever having known or even seen Henry Youtsey before they were thrown together in the jail at Frankfort, charged with the same crime. He told on cross-examination the story he has told on each of his three trials. His cross examination was not concluded upon the adjournment of court and he will be recalled on Monday.

The defense will rest its case by noon, Monday, but before doing so may call to the witness stand former Governor Bradley and Gen. Basil Duke.

The jury will be taken Monday afternoon or Tuesday morning to Frankfort to view the scene of the tragedy.

Much time in court this afternoon was taken up in proving the alleged good character of the body of mountain men which visited the county, who had been summoned but did not appear to testify.

The depositions of W. S. Taylor, Chas. Finley and other fugitives, were used by the defense to offset Youtsey's testimony.

To Whom It May Concern.

To quiet all uneasiness and stop reports intended to injure me in my race for Councilman, I state unequivocally that I shall not attempt to get the council to pass an ordinance permitting me to run a switch across Main and Virginia streets connecting with either the I. C. or the L. & N. railroads.

Respectfully,
M. C. FORBES.

Can be easily investigated. What better proof can be had? Mrs. W. L. Johnson, of 615 Jesup avenue, says: "My husband suffered for several years with kidney complaint which made its presence known by a most severe aching in his back and which often became so bad especially in the morning when rising or on occasions when he was obliged to do considerable stooping or lifting, that he could scarcely move about. It occurred to him while reading an advertisement in the local papers about Doan's Kidney Pills that they might at least give him some relief, and acting on the thought he went to Thomas & Traher's drug store and got a box. The treatment proved the merits of the remedy. The aches and pains were relieved and the other symptoms disappeared. I have the best of reason to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and am confident that in every case they will do all that is represented for them."

PRESIDENT CASTRO.

How the Venezuelan Supreme Court Judges Were Removed.

Stephen Bonsal contributes an article to the North American Review entitled "Castro: A Latin-American Type." The career of the president of Venezuela, strange as it has been, is, according to Mr. Bonsal, not unusual, for hardly a year passes but in one or another of the so-called South American republics, a brigand chief proclaims himself a dictator. The account which Mr. Bonsal gives of Castro's life, the opportunities that came in his way, the shrewdness with which he availed himself of them, his rise to power, and his method of government, is interesting, but not such as would lead a reader to desire earnestly to reside in the republic of which Castro is head. If Mr. Bonsal be not mistaken the president of Venezuela takes a view of the purposes of the Monroe doctrine which would not appeal to many Americans.

Of Castro's domination of the courts Mr. Bonsal says: "Castro's relations with the judiciary have been equally dictatorial. How likely the justices of the supreme court are to restrain his illegal acts may appear from the following incident. In the fall of 1901 the chief justice and his associates, in the performance of their duties as prescribed by law, made their annual visit to the Rotunda, or general prison in Caracas. Among the other scandalous conditions which they thought to light were the following: Over 100 prisoners were in jail held upon an executive order only and not by due process of law. Of those who had been properly committed 200 were absent, having bought their way out. The chief justice, a worthy man who had been appointed by Andrade, proposed an investigation, although none of his associates would sustain him. However, before he had taken any action a paragraph revealing the conditions found appeared in El Pregonero, a fugitive, truth-telling paper, long since suppressed. On the following morning the tribunal was invaded by soldiers and a military commission declared the court dissolved. A few hours later all the justices received a curt notice of their removal from office. Even the bar of Caracas was aroused and it was resolved that no member of the Bar association should accept the posts that had been vacated in this summary manner; however, the necessary quota of stamps was secured, and the supreme court resumed business. It is to this tribunal, I may point out in passing, that the powers declined to submit their claims, greatly arousing the ire of the American editor, thereby, though at the same time they secured the approval of every American resident in Venezuela."

BAD COINS AND CHARITY.

Keeping Them in Circulation Advances Interests of Mendicants. "Bad coin is promotive of charity," said a philistine member of the metropolitan police force as he stood on Pennsylvania avenue the other day musing over the strange things of life, according to the Washington Star.

"Explain how bad coins produce charitable inclinations," replied the listener to the officer's remarks. "Out where I live is a grocer," continued the officer, "and that grocer supplies a family that is supported entirely by begging. He gets all the coin that is daily dropped into the hand of the man who begs it. That is, he gets a large part of it—as much as he will take. Another large part of it is so defective that it can only be kept going by means of great ingenuity. The fact is, when a man or a woman gets a coin that causes objections when it is presented in the ordinary course of trade, he or she usually is affected charitably, and the first beggar that is met, especially if it is a blind man, gets the money. I have often thought that if the beggars ever get together to form a trust they would advance their interests wonderfully by getting a large amount of damaged coin in circulation."

SALISBURY DEAD.

England's Premier Succumbs to Long Illness.

Estimate of Him From Justin McCarthy's Pen—Was 73 Years Old.

Lord Salisbury was born in 1830 at Hatfield, and served in parliament and the government for fifty years, entering the house of commons as Lord Robert Cecil in 1853. He held his seat in the commons until the death of his father and his eldest brother elevated him to the peerage and transferred the scene of his activities to the house of lords.

Lord Salisbury has been described as a big Englishman, both mentally and physically, by some, and by others in less complimentary terms.

Justin McCarthy described him by saying: "His tall, bent, awkward figure; his prematurely bald crown, his face with an outline and a beard that reminded one of a Jew peddler from the Minorities; his ungainly gestures, his unmelodious voice, and the extraordinary and wanton bitterness of his tongue set the ordinary observer strongly against him. He seemed to delight in being gratuitously offensive."

He averted many wars in Europe during the time he was minister for foreign affairs.

In 1896 after he resumed the premiership that had been Lord Roseberry's for a time, Lord Salisbury was challenged on the Venezuelan boundary question by the historic message to congress from President Cleveland. Public opinion in England was in an inflamed state, and the question of war or peace hung in the balance. Lord Salisbury was extremely cautious, and finally yielded to the demands of the United States and agreed to arbitration.

Viscount Cranbourne, who succeeds to the marquise, is at present under the secretary of state for foreign affairs.

WEALTHY WOMEN.

Widow of Alvarado, of Mexico, Leads With $100,000,000.

New York, Aug. 22.—In connection with the appearance of Senora Alvarado, of Mexico, as one of the richest, if not the very richest, women in the world, the following list of some of the Mexican multi-millionaires' companions is interesting. The amounts are estimated, but are believed to be approximately correct:

- Senora Alvarado, $100,000,000.
- Miss Krupp, of Essen, $70,000,000.
- Mrs. Hettie Green, $50,000,000.
- Daughter of Baron Hirsch, $35,000,000.
- Duchess of Hamilton, $35,000,000.
- Mrs. William Astor, $30,000,000.
- Baroness Burdett-Coutts, $30,000,000.
- Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard, $30,000,000.
- Mrs. J. W. Mackay, $20,000,000.
- Miss Helen M. Gould, $20,000,000.
- Miss Martha T. Fliske, $12,500,000.
- Miss May Golet, $12,500,000.
- Mrs. Alexander Van Bunsiaer, $12,000,000.

This is by no means a complete list of the world's very rich women, but it contains the names of some of the richest and most noted.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Tennis experts have been playing a more or less prominent part in the public affairs of the east, and the preliminary practice for the international matches have caused considerable interest. American players have, as a rule, been playing an unsteady game and their real form not shown.

R. T. Doherty, with his brother, R. F. Doherty, and H. F. Mahony, recently arrived to take part in the matches, has perhaps displayed the best tennis shown yet in the east, and that only when forced out of his easy-going stride to prevent the loss of a set. Doherty goes at the game much like a man playing for the pure animal enjoyment of it, leisurely making his strokes and at peace with himself and the world. Once aroused, though, his speed and steadiness are something remarkable and are some indication of the style of game the Americans are up against. His cross-court drives and smashes, beautifully and ferociously placed, are decidedly dangerous to his opponents. If in the international matches he has the ability to so vary his style from the easy strength-saving game to the fast play there is no doubt he could win the series, strength conditions being equal.

In the tournaments so far played on the Metropolitan tennis courts, this season little attention has been given the new service rule, more familiarly known as the foot-fault rule which was made by the United States National Lawn Tennis association. Where the average American player is at variance with those who advocated the change is in that part of the rule which says: "It is not a fault if one only of the server's feet does not touch the ground at the moment at which the service is delivered. He shall place both feet on the ground immediately before serving, and not take a running or walking start." This will make it a difficult matter for those players who were so fast at getting to the net behind their service to attain that position of vantage. It has been the force of these aggressive tactics that has beaten the Englishmen from the old days. The Goodbody down to the time of the great competitions of last year, which witnessed the overthrow of the Doherty brothers.

Speed and ability to break world's records do not always win middle-distance bicycle races, as was shown recently at Boston, when Bob-By Walhour defeated Georges Leander, of Chicago, and Basille Gulchard, the Frenchman. The distance was 15 miles from a standing start and Walhour won in 18:11. The Dutchman is the chap who recently reeled off a mile at Pittsburgh in 1:08, creating a new mark, while Leander made the prominence recently by breaking all world's records from one to 15 miles.

Middle distance pace-following nowadays is a much more dangerous position than used to be in the days of the triples and quads pulled by leg-power. Since the introduction of mechanical pace there have been many fatalities and now every precaution is taken to guard against such accidents as resulted in the deaths of Johnny Noland, Harry Evers and others in the past. The pacemaker, too, comes in for a great deal of consideration and the man over the motor now presents a strange sight to eyes accustomed to the somber attire of the old days. In the first place the pacemaker is provided with a solid leather cap, such as is used by football players. This fits snugly on his head and also protects his ears, so in case of a fall he has a chance to escape fracture of the skull. He is dressed as warmly as if going on an arctic expedition—a leather suit and rubber overshoes being designed to protect him. The clothes are all heavily padded and this saves him some when an accident results in a fall. The pace-follower has to take more chances. He cannot handicap himself with heavy clothing and a headgear and has to take his chance in a mix-up. About the only safeguard he has is an iron attachment on the rear of the pacing machine which prevents him from touching wheels with the motor. This, in itself, however, saves many falls, although in the old days Jimmy Michael used to nonchalantly rub wheels while going at top speed with out coming the cropper that usually results.

The grand old game of yachting has been revived on the Oconomowoc lakes in Wisconsin. The twenty-fifth annual regatta of the Oconomowoc Yacht club was held on Le Belle lake recently. Boats from half a dozen lakes were entered. The event was the most interesting regatta that has taken place on the lake in years and as a social affair it surpassed all expectations. Hughey Duffy, manager of the Milwaukee Western Lake club, has announced that there was no truth in the report that the Milwaukee club was to be transferred to Peoria and the latter club shifted here for the balance of the season.

The Cost of a Shower of Eggs.

The Supreme Court of North Carolina has affirmed the judgment of the lower court awarding Henry F. Seawell $4,500 for being struck with fifteen bad eggs while upon the premises of the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company during the campaign of 1900. Mr. Seawell was the populist candidate for attorney general and was to speak to the people of Shelby. Arriving there he was told by a delegation of citizens that they did not wish to hear him. He decided not to speak and while awaiting to take the train a mob of his opponents pelted him with eggs, being aided and abetted by the station agent. The court held that a common carrier is not only bound not to assault and maltreat an intended passenger, but after he has gone upon its premises it should protect him from indignity, assault and battery. After this North Carolina candidates who fear rotten eggs, can engage in rear platform oratory without danger of being molested.—Ex.

BREAKING THE ICE.

We had some offish neighbors once that we reckoned they were "out the proudest folks we'd ever known." An' when we passed 'em now an' then we held our heads up high. To make dead sure they wouldn't snub us if they was to try. It really made me nervous, so I just turned up one day. An' I thought I'd go ahead an' show my manners, any way. On Sunday, said I, "turnin' round an' a' look at the view." I looked at them an' says: "Hello!" An' they says: "Howdy do!" It wasn't the cold an' formal greetin' that you see sometimes here. They smiled an' said it hearty, into they mean every word. It's solemn to reflect on what we miss along life's way. By not bein' natural an' good-humored day by day. There's lots o' folks who ring the simple joys of life aside. Because they dread the shadow of their own unbecom' pride. And one time out o' ten you'll find the rule works right an' true. Just tell the world "Hello!" an' it'll answer "Howdy do!" —Washington Star.

UNCLE JACOB'S STORY

BY ANNIE HAMILTON DONNELLY.

Uncle Jacob Knapp sat on an old chest, drumming with his heels against the battered side. He held up to the caller's view two twisted, misshapen fingers. "This shirt an' them fingers," he said, "take 'em together, make quite a yarn, as yarns go." "Oh, tell it, Uncle Jacob!" tell it, he importuned the Visitor. "Well, time's slack, I don't mind if I do. Mebbe you ain't noticed how sort o' stoopin' over I be? Well, that goes along with the fingers and the chest. 'Tain't old age done that—no, sir, 'tain't! The Knappes are great on keeping straight as a die—till they die."

"It's a case of sins getting visited on to the third and fourth generations, as the Good Book says they do. I'm the third generation. 'Twas my grandfather done the sinning. He stole."

The Visitor sat forward on his chair, intent and eager. Could Uncle Jacob's grandfather have been a bank cashier? The Visitor was not quite sure there were bank cashiers as long ago as Uncle Jacob's grandfather; so, a little disappointed, he sank back again and waited. "Yes, he stole—doughnuts. He wasn't only about as old as you be"—the Visitor winced and tried to touch his dangling toes to the floor—but that wasn't any excuse for grandfather. And he was just the hungriest boy you ever see! Was there anything personal in that last clause? The Visitor decided that there was not and felt relieved.

"And he specially relished great-grandmother's doughnuts. They were the spicy, slippery, tasty kind o' doughnuts that don't last a minute after you begin on 'em. The receipt come down along with the chest, an' I've eat them very same kind o' doughnuts time and often. They ain't prudent doughnuts to make—they're too good."

Uncle Jacob made a sudden inspired trip to the pantry, and came back with two doughnuts. "Try 'em!" he said, hospitably. The Visitor at the third bite was moved with forgiving sympathy for Uncle Jacob's erring grandfather.

"But I might as well commence to the beginning," he went on. "This chest I'm sitting on is a hairbush in the Potter family. It fell to mother and then to me. We set a store by the old chest, now I tell you!"

With his twisted fingers he smoothed the time-polished lid affectionately.

"It was great-grandmother's wedding chest, with her finery and sheets in it—then grandmother's and mother's. She give it to me, not having any daughter, neither to make quilts and holders for, to put in the old chest. It would have been a sort of comfort."

Uncle Jacob's eyes looked out of the window, toward the little grassy cemetery where the Visitor knew was buried a tiny baby daughter. The Visitor stole a little nearer to the old man.

"Land of liberty!" Uncle Jacob presently continued, "there's a sight of stories this chest could tell—stories of wedding clothes and burying clothes. There's been three generations of little heels barged against it, grumming tunes. There's the dented mine made!"

Uncle Jacob leaned over and pointed out several little dents half-way down the chest's side.

"Them's mine, and them, there, is Uncle Caleb's dents. I've always remembered mother's pointing them out. And seems to me—I ain't so sure of that, though—that that terrible big dent is the one grandfather made with the chest when he stole the doughnuts. But I ain't so sure—I don't know but it's the other one over there, higher to the hole."

The Visitor sat forward again on his chair. Then the story was coming at last!

"Stole the doughnuts, you say, Uncle Jacob?" he said, with gentle insinuation.

"What's that? Oh, the doughnuts? Land of liberty, ain't I told you that yarn yet? I'm a terrible critter to go preambeling along! Now we'll get down to business. You see great-grandmother kep' this chest up attic to store summer clothes in winters and vasy vasy, winter clothes in summers. She was a terrible land to keep things just so. They say she always used to keep great-grandfather's winter shirts to one end of the chest and the summer ones to the other end, when it come their turn to be stored. And once, when she was laid up with phthisis, one o' the family packed the clothes away for her. When she come to unpack 'em, they warn't in the right end, and it worked great-grandmother up so that she had another spell of the phthisis. That's what they say, but, land of liberty an' freedom, you can't believe more'n quarter what folks says—"

The dangling toes of the Visitor beat a persistent tattoo on the rounds of his chair. He would never get to the story! Uncle Jacob must be switched off from that Cross Corners road instantly and on to that "chest" again. The Visitor's supper bell would ring presently, and he wanted to hear that doughnut story first. "Say, Uncle Jacob, did you say your great-grandmother kep' her doughnuts in the chest?" the Visitor asked suddenly.

"Oh! well, she didn't, not to say keep 'em there, but she hid 'em there once when she was going to camp-meetin' with great-grandfather to spend the day. She looked 'em in good and even, lay along about noon time, I reckon 'twas grandfather got real doughnut hungry. He didn't want the mince pie and cookies and baked beans all ready for him in the buttery—he wanted doughnuts, and grandfather was just as set as—well, as I be! I calculate setness is just as hereditary as the consumption. Now, there's the Beales, they—"

"Didn't he like the mince pie?" broke in the Visitor, hastily. The Visitor was fond of mince pie.

"No, he didn't. He wanted doughnuts, and he had 'em. He kep' hunting all the afternoon for 'em, getting hungrier and hungrier and satter and satter. 'Long about milking time he went up attic and poked round there. Then he knew he'd got 'em! He could smell 'em! You could smell great-grandmother's doughnuts, they do say, clear from their house to the schoolhouse—far's from here to Job Milliken's, I calculate. Anyhow, you could smell 'em through him boards, and grandfather smelt 'em through this chest—a real tasty, mouth-watering smell. He couldn't stan' it. He got the chest and hammer, and cut a hole right through where you can see that cleat nailed on. It's a terrible jaggedy hole you can see from inside, but that was because grandfather was in such a pucker. He was doughnut-hungry. But he was a master-hand at tool, forso bey, other times."

"Well, he eat 'em up—that's what. Then he went clear out to the joint o' the roads to meet great-grandmother an' own up. That's the kind of boy my grandfather was!"

The Visitor straightened back and dilated eyes indicated that if ever he were tempted—doughnut-tempted—that would be just his own mode of procedure—even to going beyond the "joint of the roads."

"He was quite a man, my grandfather was!" Uncle Jacob kept on, drumming the old chest with vigorous heels. Then he looked down to the two uncanny fingers on his right hand, and they appeared to him remindingly.

"Well, grandfather died o' a good, green old age. That chest lived along through another generation, up in that attic; then it was moved over to our attic. Father was a real neat man, an' the doughnut-hole sort of worried him. So he nailed a cleat on the outside of it temporary, till he could get time to mend it better. There come about that time. We boys sleep in the north chamber and work up all of a sudden, smelling smoke. Now, enough, the house was a fire! Land o' liberty an' freedom and union!—didn't we boys fly round getting things out! And all at once I recollected the old chest an' put for it. It was terribly smoky, and I was kind of dazed and turned round. I lugged the chest across the floor to the top of the staircase and started down ahead of it. I got it started down all right and then it up and stuck fast, just by that cleat over the doughnut-hole! Couldn't move it at all for a spell, till I got desperate an' hove it like all possessed—"

"Did it budge? Did you budge it, Uncle Jacob?"

"Well, it budged then! It went head over heels clean to the bottom, that time."

"Then you didn't have time to get it down, did you?"

"No—no, I didn't have time to get it down, nor myself, either. Me'n the chest come down together."

Uncle Jacob chuckled grimly. The Visitor went over and sat down on the chest, too, waiting for the rest. But Uncle Jacob was lost in reminiscences—going downstairs with the chest and "coming to," days afterward, on a neighbor's spare-room bed. After awhile he began to talk again.

"I was terrible sick," he said. "Laid up all winter and considerable used up for going on a year. Them two fingers—spreading them apart from their brothers—'was splintered pretty thorough, and my back got a twist in it, too, somewhere. I calculate the madder of my spine got kind of churned up, going down, and never quite come to."

The Visitor's supper bell pealed faintly in the distance, and the Visitor got down from the chest.

"I'm much obliged, Uncle Jacob," he said, politely. "That's a very nice story."

"Well," Uncle Jacob answered, judicially, "it's got a moral to it. I hope you see the moral, sonny? Why, if grandfather hadn't have bored through to them doughnuts, father wouldn't have put that cleat on and it wouldn't have stuck—"

—and them two fingers wouldn't have been crooked, nor my back neither. Land of liberty!—ain't that a moral long's the moral law? It reaches clear through three generations."

Uncle Jacob rose stiffly to his feet. "Good-bye," he said.

"Good-bye, Uncle Jacob."

"Don't you forget the moral, sonny—and don't you forget, neither, that grandfather was a terrible good sort of a man—after he owned up. I don't lay up nothing against grandfather, not a thing. I've been doughnut-hungry myself."—Country Gentleman.

Unknown Animals.

In spite of the efforts to trap the animals of the deep sea, many forms—perhaps some of great size—may still be unknown. The Prince of Monaco, one of the greatest of marine naturalists, has shown that life of some kind probably reaches the deepest ocean bottom, and in a very ingenious way he has proven the existence of an enormous octopus that appears to frequent the middle depths of the Atlantic. Noticing that the dying sperm whale rejects some of its latest food, he hastened to secure some of this. It included fragments of such an octopus, and one of the antennae, though incomplete, measured not less than 29 feet in length.

Toads in Rocks.

"Amazing," said a scientist, "is the popularity of the belief that toads live for long spaces of time in rocks. Only last week a quarryman sent me a toad that he had found imbedded, he said, in a solid block of stone. Of course there is no truth in the idea that these reptiles live shut up for years without food and air, but there is truth in the stories of their being found in rocks. The rocks, though, are not solid, as the finders incline to think, and the toads have only been in them for a few hours, instead of for years and years."—Philadelphia Record.

NEW TURN

Taken By L. K. Taylor in Court Proceedings.

Chairman Morrison Revokes Certificate Given Lovett, Alleging Fraud.

L. K. Taylor, of Paducah, filed a suit Saturday afternoon, says the News-Democrat, in the McCracken circuit court against John G. Lovett, of Benton; C. B. Hill, Secretary of State; Chas. Graham, clerk of McCracken county, and J. N. Herndon, clerk of Marshall county, asking for an injunction to prevent the defendants from placing John G. Lovett's name under the roster on the official ballot, as the Democratic nominee for commonwealth's attorney, in the Second judicial district at the election in November.

In the petition Mr. Taylor recites the fraud alleged to have been practiced at the primary on May 9, in Marshall county, specifying what it consisted.

He also files an exhibit with the petition in the form of a document signed by Chairman C. W. Morrison, revoking his signature to a certificate issued to Lovett before the contest, which directs the secretary of state not to honor it.

There is also another exhibit filed, showing a certificate from C. W. Morrison that Taylor received a majority of the votes cast and is entitled to go under the roster.

Attorney Taylor asks in his prayer that Taylor be restrained from using the certificate first signed by C. W. Morrison on the ground that it was obtained by fraud and has since been revoked. Also that the county clerks of McCracken and Marshall be enjoined from printing Lovett's name under the roster.

The case was taken before Circuit Judge Husbands Saturday afternoon, but on his request, it was set for Monday.

There is not a parallel case to this anywhere, and the point is a new one. The question is whether or not Mr. Morrison can now withdraw his name from the certificate originally issued. This will be settled by Circuit Judge Husbands on the motion for the restraining order.

Saturday night Mr. L. K. Taylor stated in an interview that there was yet plenty of time to call another primary to choose a candidate for commonwealth's attorney in case he should win his case Monday.

KENTUCKY AT WORLD'S FAIR.

News of the Progress of the Advance Work Dished Out in Small Doses.

Manager Wm. Robinson, of the Haldeman Warehouse, Louisville, has kindly placed at the disposal of the Kentucky Exhibit Association about 5,000 square feet of floor space in the basement of this building and the Association has decided to make it the depot for mineral exhibits, which are now being collected. Already ten barrels of crude oil have come from different districts in Kentucky. The first of the ores to arrive was two barrels of zinc from Owen county.

The Kentucky Exhibit Association contemplates paying the entire expense of all live stock sent from the state to the World's Fair for exhibition purposes. The Exposition officials have offered $250,000 in premiums. The Association may give in addition a medal to every Kentucky prize winner.

Editor O. E. Hurst, of Millersburg, writes the Exhibit Association that a collection of bones and relics of a pre-historic monster has been found at Lower Blue Lick Springs that is worthy a place at the St. Louis exposition. One task of the monster measures eight feet in length.

The giant hippopotamus with the Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers consolidated shows has grown so large that a new den had to be constructed for his mightiness to ride in. It is the largest ever built and is handled by a team of twenty horses. The utmost care must be taken in loading it on the show trains because of its enormous size. The beast continues to grow and there seems to be no limit to its ultimate size. Already he is larger in the body than a majority of elephants. He easily is the leading feature of a wonderfully complete menagerie carried with the consolidation. It will exhibit here on Thursday, Aug. 27.

WILLIE COWAN

Strikes It Rich at Saratoga Races.
—$100,000 to the Good.

A Saratoga, N. Y., special says that "Billy" Cowan, one of the bookmakers from Chicago, has struck it rich. The dispatch says:

At a rough estimate, nearly three-quarters of a million dollars have been added to the bank rolls of the men who have stuck to legitimate bookmaking. Those who resort to the in and out and hedging game have lost. A man with the strict business principles of "Billy" Cowan could not possibly lose.

There is no means of finding out positively how much richer Cowan is today than he was at the opening of the meeting, but the sum is large, not one cent less than $150,000. It has been a case of "every day the same" with him. He handles any commission that comes along at a fair market price. For instance, a heavy better will say, "I'll bet you $10,000 on such and such horse." Cowan, perhaps, has 2 to 1 marked as the market price. He will reply: You can leave it all here at $17,000 to $10,000." This is no doubt satisfactory to the player, as it is a better price than he could average if he went shopping around the ring. Commissions of that kind have been handed in to Cowan, and frequently two and three in a face on different horses. The result is that he is not only handling nearly all the big money, but he is getting a better percentage for it than the majority of his neighbors, as they have to go to a higher figure to get a horse played, which, of course, reduces their percentages.

Yet with all the big money that Cowan handles there has been an abundance for others, the reports of individual winnings averaging anywhere from $5,000 to $50,000.
